WHAT DOES TTS MEAN TO YOU?

At TTS we're truly invested in the future of education. We only create for the education market, so our sole focus and drive is working hard to create high-quality, innovative, and versatile educational resources, grounded in research, that will really make a difference in your classrooms and settings.

These amazing resources are exclusive to TTS so you won't find them anywhere else.

THE PROCESS

TTS have a strong legacy of working with leading experts, influencers, educators and academics. For nearly 40 years our Innovation Team have worked in partnership with hundreds of educators to come up with the most innovative and inspiring new resource ideas.

These ideas can be sparked from just about anywhere and can come from not only our in-house experts, but from educators all over the world before going to our dedicated Innovation Team to cultivate and develop.

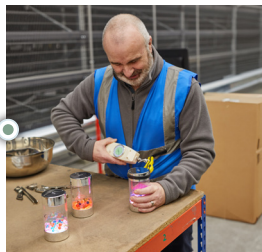

1. IDEA GENERATION

Our Innovation team collaborate with amazing educators and experts to imagine innovative resources to revolutionise teaching and learning.

2. DESIGN AND PROTOTYPE

The very best concepts are meticulously developed, refined and perfected by our dedicated innovation team.

3. RIGOROUS SAFETY TESTING

All of our TTS resources are tested to the very highest safety and quality standards to ensure they are safe for children to use and last for years to come.

4. TRIALLING STAGE

Resources are shared with educators, experts and most importantly children, to be put through their paces. This ensures they're not only safe, but also fit for purpose.

5. THE BIG REVEAL

Launched with practical and inspirational content, activity guides and even lesson plans, TTS go the extra mile to help you get the most out of our resources.

6. LISTENING TO FEEDBACK

You may notice new & improved versions of classic TTS Developed resources. That's because we take your feedback seriously, and are always striving to enhance and improve.

WORKING WITH EXPERTS

Here at TTS we're committed to creating developmentally aligned, inspiring and innovative resources, grounded in research and loved by you. Your valued feedback is what helps us ensure our resources are high-quality, versatile and educationally appropriate, creating new reasons for children to love learning everyday. But don't take our word for it, here is what you and our experts have to say.

"We introduced the Giant Spinning Top to our youngest children initially. With the main lights in the room turned off, it was spun and placed down for three little ones to watch. Instant curiosity kicked in!"
Woodlands Nursery and Forest School, Melton Mowbray

"Perfect size for little hands and robust enough to survive some rough and tumble!"
Congreaves Primary School, Cradley Heath

Look out for testimonials, reviews and ideas on how you have been using our resources to inspire and enrich learning.

INTRODUCING OUR EARLY YEARS EDUCATION CONSULTANT

ADAM MARYCZ

IN HOUSE EDUCATIONALIST
AND EARLY YEARS
EDUCATION CONSULTANT

Hello there! I wanted to say a big hello and let you all know how I can help you, your fellow educators, children and their families to get the very best learning and development outcomes from the products at TTS. I will also be unpicking and reflecting on some of the most critical challenges facing the Early Years sector to collaboratively develop best practice for all children's education and well-being.

My name is Adam Marycz and in 2024 I became part of the talented team of In-house Educationalists at TTS as the Early Years Education Consultant. My previous role was as an early years teacher and setting manager for 14 years in the North-West of England.

Most recently I had the pleasure of opening and establishing a school-based, privately owned nursery and wraparound provision setting. I have experienced all the benefits and challenges that come with creating an 'outstanding' inclusive and purposeful play space for children aged 2 through to 11 years old! However my educational journey goes all the way back to its roots in a nursery setting as an educator and then room leader with children from 0-2.

As a true believer in lifelong learning, I am always seeking opportunities to learn and grow whether this is through my own continued professional development, gaining Early Years Teacher Status and starting a Masters whilst managing a setting or writing and delivering training and other thought-provoking content to others at early years events or with organisations.

I am a passionate advocate of the vital role early childhood plays in supporting children to be the best version of themselves and to grow into the leaders of tomorrow. When we, as educators consider our very reason for existing in this space it nearly always come down to that desire to make a difference to children's lives. To have an impact.

We want children to be the best they can possibly be, for all children and their families to be afforded the same opportunities.

All of these values strike at the heart of my role at TTS and I am loving visiting so many inspiring early years providers, to play alongside children and help scaffold their learning and help enrich the learning opportunities of the provision.

And finally, I look forward to much more collaboration with you, the educators, in settings, or at conferences and events, to develop best practice, and to be an advocate for early childhood.

Over the next few pages I will share some of my current favourite TTS products to engage children and enhance their learning and development and also introduce the idea of how purposeful play spaces can support both the 'child's curriculum' and 'adult's curriculum' at the same time.

THE INTENT OF PLAY SPACES VS THE IMPACT

When we are creating and enhancing purposeful play spaces there is so much to consider, such as: the balance of natural and artificial light, layout of the furniture and the curriculum aligned resources contained within the provision.

Recently, I have been reflecting on the difference between the adult and the child's curriculum. This resonates with me, especially with my most recent experiences of developing play spaces to build on the learning and development of children aged from 2-11. The significant age and developmental differences between the children who all accessed the same space presented many challenges as well as opportunities when it came to building purposeful provision.

The nuances of the two different lenses through which our provision should be viewed are defined by Fisher (2024). She says the adult's curriculum is 'what we want children to learn' – this is set out in policy documents and guidance such as the Early Learning Goals and Educational Programmes within the Early Years Foundation Stage Statutory Framework in addition to your own curriculum goals and intentions. It is often this curriculum which we align our provision too, whether this is through curriculum mapping or high-level, mid-level and low-level skill audits for example.

The child's curriculum however is 'what children want to learn' – this stems from 'their exploration, enquiry and play; from their personal and shared interests and fascinations; from curiosity about the world. Sometimes this curiosity and these interests are brought from home as children seek to build on the funds of knowledge they bring with them from their families and communities.'

Some reflections: Do we always reflect on our provision through this lens? Do we sit down with children in a particular space and ask them for their ideas, interests and wants?

Children are naturally curious, exploratory and investigative thus it is likely they will find new and unique ways to engage with the provision we plan. It is possible, this play will be in line with their curriculum rather than the adult's and their goals will differ from the original intent we had.

Both sets of intentions have an important role to play. Each can provide children with the opportunity to build on their existing knowledge and skills, master concepts and solidify understanding. They complement rather than contradict each other if understood and facilitated correctly.

It is therefore critical we ensure we reflect on our provision through both of these lenses and rather than saying phrases such as 'the sand doesn't belong in the water' to a child, we instead take a step back to understand the child's intent, the way they desire to engage with the resources and the impact this play with have on their learning.

ENHANCING LEARNING ACROSS THE EARLY YEARS

As settings look to expand further and provision is accessed by children of a wider age and developmental range the developmental impact of resources included is becoming ever more important. Below, I share some of the cross curricular resources which will inspire and engage children throughout the early years to learn through play that we have at TTS!

TTS Light Up Recordable Diamond Domes

EL11346

The combination of varied cause and effect experiences children will instigate when engaging with these domes will extend their computational understanding allowing them to observe vital connections between the way they interact with them and the reactions that occur. Whether it is the changing of colours, hearing sounds or being able to record and playback themselves these domes truly will enhance learning across multiple areas of development.

TTS Small World Glow Houses 2pk

EL11353

Providing children with these glowing houses, complete with bricks and foliage, two floors and open windows and doors allows for imaginative play to flourish, extends vocabulary in relation to the glow effect as well as being able to be incorporated into a sensory/dark, more low-stimulus space too alongside the other wide range of products within the glow range.

Wooden Small World Diversity Multicultural Family

EY06025

If you have the above glow-houses then why not add our wooden small world family too! Imaginative play through representation provides children with the opportunity to recreate their real-life experience, explore different family structures and also create new worlds and interactions in a far-off world! This set will also stimulate a child's oracy by allowing children to create their own narratives and individual characters whether these are designed to represent themselves and their friends or invented personas.

Busy Blocks and Balls

EY10625

Maths mastery is a phrase that we often here repeated in early years. These wooden spheres and blocks encourage mathematical understanding such as one-to-one correspondence, number bonds and subitising. Hand-eye co-ordination is another benefit of adding this resource to your continuous provision in addition to them not looking out of place housed with other small-world/ loose parts resources.

BRING LIGHT INTO LEARNING - THE MAGICAL WORLD OF LIGHT AND SHADOW PLAY

Light and shadow play is an impactful way for children to develop a range of skills, from enhancing communication to immersing themselves in creativity. Glow and light resources are a great way to create soothing, calming and magical spaces where children are able to regulate their emotions and explore their senses.

The Awe and Wonder of Light (and Dark) Dr. Alistair Bryce-Clegg

Light and dark are naturally occurring states that children will be very familiar with, so this makes them easily accessible and good starting point for learning.

Light play is particularly successful when children have the opportunity to control the light source. When they are able to do this, they are not only exploring concepts such as cause and effect – like pushing a switch to make a torch come on and off. They are also having some powerful control over the emotional connections of anyone who is within their near vicinity.

Light provides huge potential for children to be able to manipulate and view the world they inhabit in a variety of different ways. Shining light onto an object can completely change how it looks. Shining light through it can change its colour. Shining a light at it can create a shadow that can be tiny or huge the possibilities are endless.

The Power of Light Ben Kingston-Hughes

Playing with light and shadow is hugely beneficial for children and intrinsically rich in terms of spatial awareness. The fact that a shadow becomes bigger the nearer to the light source is innately mathematical and simple shadow play with children can help embed complex scientific concepts whilst providing them with joyful explorations.

It is also a fantastic way to make stories come to life. The value of sensory play to developing brains cannot be overestimated and our early explorations with light and shadow are a wonderful way to embed sensory play into our settings.

They fascinate children and they draw the attention because they are novel and interesting. This additional level of novelty and fascination does something very interesting to the brain. If an experience is novel and fascinating it activates a filter in the brain called the “Reticular Activating System”. This filter increases focused attention and effectively uses more of the brain's limited resources to access the experience. This in turn increases capability and also memory retention. Basically, if something is fascinating and novel, you pay more attention to it, use more of your brain to process it, and remember more of the experience. So, building bricks are amazing for children, but light up bricks or other light up construction are the icing on the cake because they almost always increase the level of novelty and fascination.

Every time I bring out the light up bricks, for instance, there will be an audible “ooh” as they light up. This is regardless of whether I am delivering a children's session or an adult training session, there are just some children and adults for whom light up resources create a very special kind of joy.
